

Add A Special Touch Of Elegance To Your Wedding With Pearls

Every bride wants her wedding day to be remembered in years to come—not only by her and the groom, but also by her friends and family as well. A wonderful way to add that special flair to any special occasion

You have your dress, you've got your shoes, your hair style picked out; but you still need to "finish your look" for the big day. That is where your bridal jewelry comes in.

Diamonds are a girl's best friend, Pearls are truly a bride's best friend. Pearls never go out of style, but this season they aren't just in style, they are "hot". Not only are they "hot" they are very versatile. Pearls have been worn by fashionable women for ages.

This is your day, make the best of it, feel beautiful and find the bridal jewelry that is right for you. Feeling comfortable with how you look is all part of feeling beautiful

The neck is the focal point for most brides,

It has been said that of all the pieces of jewelry in the world, a pearl necklace is the only thing that a woman should not be without. And that's no wonder, for a pearl necklace is the embodiment of classic sophistication and timeless elegance. It goes with a variety of outfits, from casual day wear to formal evening attire. And depending on the type of pearl and color, there are various pearl necklace styles suitable for the very young, those enjoying their golden years, and almost everyone else in the middle.

The price of a pearl necklace depends on the quality of its pearls. Saltwater pearls are generally more expensive than freshwater ones, which are cultured. The sheen and the thickness of the pearls' nacre also affect the price, as well as the size and roundness of the pearls themselves.

There is nothing more beautiful to complement a wedding dress than a stunning strand of pearls. This traditional wedding jewelry is more popular than ever, with brides using all styles of pearl jewelry to add that finishing touch to their bridal ensemble. In addition to looking fabulous, wearing a pearl necklace on your wedding day has historically been known as a good luck charm, promising to bring the marriage years of happiness.

When choosing a pearl necklace for your big day, there are four main issues to evaluate. These issues will ensure your necklace and any other accessories complement your dress and add to instead of diminish your beauty.

When buying pearls you will need to choose a strand length that enhances the neckline of your gown. The best size pearls to choose are in the 5 to 8 mm range. There are many length choices with pearls. A pearl collar is usually made of 3 or more strands and measures 12-13 inches. A pearl collar will hug the middle of the neck so it works well with a v necks, plunged necks or off the shoulder gowns. A choker measures 14-16 inches and is the most versatile length to own. It will work with any gown neckline. The 17-19 inch Princess with either very high or very low necklines. There are longer lengths of pearls available however they are not very suitable for wedding gowns.

Also, many brides are using an illusion or floating setting for a single or several pearls. This setting gives the pearl the appearance of floating weightlessly around the wearer's neck, giving a more modern feel to this traditional element.

The best way to choose earrings is to try them with your gown. The best styled earring will depend on the neckline of your gown, the type of necklace you are wearing, and how you will be wearing your hair. You want your earrings to be seen but you do not want them to be overpowering. Drop earrings or short dangle earrings work well and pearls or diamonds add elegance and sparkle. If you're not wearing a necklace you may want to wear more dramatic earrings. If your dress is beaded and sparkly then you'll want to choose a more subtle earring so as not to detract from your gown.

Flowergirl Jewelry – Don't Forget Your Tiniest Member

Becoming a big part of someone's special day can be a very important moment in your flowergirl's life. Every little girl loves to play dress up and look like the big girls, and your flower girl is no different. When you asked her to be part of your special day, she was probably nervous, but very excited. You probably didn't even realize how important and special you made her feel.

Finding the right flowergirl jewelry for your little lady can sometimes be a daunting task. Many bridal salons do not carry flowergirl jewelry, making it a bit difficult for the bride to check that task off of her list. Selecting the most beautiful flowergirl jewelry that doesn't look all grown up and gaudy is very important. You don't want your flowergirl looking overdone.

When selecting your flowergirl jewelry, consider the flowergirl's dress style. Is her dress similar to the bride's? Is her dress the same color as the bridesmaids? If her dress is the same style and color as the bride's dress, and the bride will be wearing pearls, then selecting a simpler style of pearl jewelry will look most appropriate. If the flowergirl's gown matches the bridesmaids dresses, then selecting the same color or style of flowergirl jewelry to match theirs would coordinate well.

Whether you attempt to match up your flowergirl jewelry with the brides style of bridal jewelry or the bridesmaids, select flowergirl jewelry that is dainty and delicate. There are more and more online stores that are offering better selections of color and style for the flowergirl, you just have to hunt for them a little bit. Remember, this day is very important to your flowergirl. She may be just as nervous as the bride. Nevertheless, your flowergirl will feel included, special and beautiful on your wedding day when you give her flowergirl jewelry that she can proudly wear, just like the big girls.
